Nanluoguxiang

Nanluoguxiang

Nanluoguxiang used to be a rich neighborhood housing the wealthy and powerful. It has the distinction of being one of the oldest and best preserved hutongs in Beijing. Wandering through this district, one will come across countless courtyards steeped in history. However, it somehow manages to blend contemporary fashion trends with tradition and heritage. This narrow street is now famous for its quaint cafes and bars. Trendy boutiques and handicraft shops line the handsome ash-grey lanes.

Cycling through this 700 year-old hutong allows one to soak in the languid milieu of traditional Beijing courtyard homes. The contrasts of traditional against modern, artistic versus pedestrian make Nanluoguxiang a place not to be missed.
